

I am a Wisconsin resident who is very upset that the Banking Industry can change what has been a tremendous help to the Wisconsin consumer. I am talking about the Wisconsin 'no call' list. If I want to talk to someone about purchasing something "I" will choose to make that call. People calling and annoying me, through my objection, is just unbelievable. Why should I have to say 'no' for a year and a half? Whose rights are being questioned here? One call should suffice. I hope that you will take my rights and privacy into consideration? The banking industry should not be able to change the law because they believe they are being infringed upon. Again, 'what about me'? Protect me, help me, as a tax payer and a consumer. "Don't change what has worked"!!
